A little song of Picardie.

Pale leaves waver and whisper low
(Silver leaves of the poplar tree)
Waters wander and willows blow
In Picardie.

Here the youth on a blue May night
(Soft to his maiden's home steals he)
Binds a bough to the lintel's height,
Of dark fir-tree.

Gaston sigheth for Bernadette
(Sorrow to come—or joy to be)
This she knows by the token set
In secrecy

Where be the waters to drown regret?
Where be the leaves of sleep's own tree?
Nowhere else in the world—nor yet
In Picardie.

CLAUDE DEBUSSY, writes upon the compositions of CYRIL SCOTT.

"CYRIL SCOTT is one of the newest artists of the present generation. His rhythmical experiments, his technique, even his style of writing all seem to have a rage and a dash which are to be found in few men. His melodies, however, compel him to carry out to the full his particular system of pathetics, and his only.

"This music infolds itself somewhat at the manner of those Javanese rhymes which, instead of being condensed within traditional forms, are the outcome of imagination despairing itself in innumerable arithmetics. And the incessantly changing aspects of the inner melody are an intoxication for the ear—In fact, irresistible. All these qualities are more than sufficient to justify confidence in this musician, so exceptionally equipped, although quite young."

"CYRIL SCOTT'S Songs are amongst the most delightful and original in the English Language."

"CYRIL SCOTT'S Pianoforte Works merit recognition from all those who are in any wise interested in the trend of modern music."

"We have very few English writers of any note for the piano to-day, but of these, CYRIL SCOTT is in the very front rank."—From The Musical Standard.
