Mavourneen

I hear your voice, Mavourneen, through the shadows dim and far,
I see your smiles, Mavourneen, as the glistening sunbeams are;
'Tis in my dreams they come to me, and sweet the joy they bring,
But with the dawn they flee from me, and they leave me sorrowing.

'Tis bitter rue, Mavourneen, the longing and the pain
That will not cease, Mavourneen, till I see your face again.
If I could have my will with you, I'd reach across the sea,
My spirit-hands would hold you, dear, and bring you home to me!

I hear your voice, Mavourneen, thro' the shadows dim and far,
I see your smiles, Mavourneen, as the glinting sunbeams are;
'Tis in my dreams they come to me, and sweet the joy they bring,
But with the dawn they flee from me, and they leave me sorrowing,
They leave me, Ma - vour - neen!
