shoon. Of the little sandaled shoon.

Paper houses light as feathers Tucked among the green blue grass. Of the gardens where the sandals

Scuffle, scuffle in the grass, Pitter patter as they Ivory tinted flower faces Bend low where the Buddha dreams,

Hearing just the pit-ter pitter Of the sandaled feet that gleam,

Little heathen shoos that gleam.

And the dropping of the rain Makes me think I hear the patter Of the sandaled feet again.

Patter of the shoon again.
