“Greeting.”

Sweetheart, when you walk my way,
Be it dark or be it day;
Dreary winter, fairy May,
    I shall know and greet you.
For each day of grief or grace
Brings you nearer my embrace;
Love hath fashioned your dear face,
    I shall know you when I meet you.

I have known your touch, your tone,
All the years we walked alone;
Still in life, or death, my own,
    I shall know and greet you.
Tho' the black night be not riv'n,
Tho' no light of love be giv'n;
Here, or in the courts of heav'n,
    I shall know you when I meet you.
