Alone up on the mountain a poor lost sheep I stray. The darkness closes 'round me; I cannot find the way. The good sheep on the hill-side all safe in shelter lie

Ninety and nine within the fold,

'nneath the Master's eye,

While I am on the mountain by sin and shame oppressed,

Longing for the Shepherd and the shelter of His breast.

Lord Jesus, in Thy mercy,

O leave the ninety and nine Good sheep upon the hill-side and come to this one of Thine, Who, weary of his wandering and weary of his sin, Seeks once more the heav'ly fold and longs to enter in. But the way is dark and lonely and the shadows gather fast; Still I know that Thou, Good Shepherd, canst lead me home at last. Still I know that Thou, Good Shepherd, canst lead me home at last.

The darker night draws on apace,

Master, Master, here am I With nothing now to guide me, wilt Thou not hear my cry? My sins they weigh upon me, O Shepherd, let me lean On thy sure strength and promise and wash and make me clean. Lead me in the green pastures and by the waters still. I only ask to follow and seek to do Thy will. Lord Jesus, in Thy mercy, O leave the ninety and nine Good sheep upon the hill-side and come to this one of Thine, Who, wear-y of his wander-ing and weary of his sin, Seeks once more the heav'ly fold and longs to enter in. But the way is dark and lonely and the shadows gather fast; Still I know that Thou, Good Shepherd, canst lead me home at last. Still I know that Thou, Good Shepherd, canst lead me home at last.
