Arietta.

I made a song of tears and fire,
I caught a tune from wind and sea,
With heart-strings five I strung my lyre,
To sing a song for thee.

I plucked a jewel from the stars,
From sunbeams wove gold filigree,
I dared the height, I braved the scars,
To make a crown for thee.

Mr. Cyril Scott.

Mr. Cyril Scott is one of our younger moderns who displays not only a very marked individuality, but a far greater feeling for imagination than is exhibited by the majority of his contemporaries.—The Times.

"Mr. CYRIL SCOTT should suffer the pain of seeing his songs appreciated by the public. One of the new composers..."—Daily Telegraph.

"When Mr. CYRIL SCOTT'S compositions were first published there were many critics who prophesied that in him we should find a worthy leader for the new and progressive musical movement in this country. To Mr. Scott appears at the present moment a musician of far greater promise than he ever did before."—Manchester Guardian.
