AUBADE.

O tie your hair, my dainty dear,
   And come with me across the hills:
This is the Springtime of the year,
   This is the month of daffodils.
O tie your hair and bring your shawl,
   No need have you for adorning;
The wind is up, the throstles call,
   And the world is alive with morning.

Spirit of Joy, I hear thy steps,
   Exquisite gladness, art thou here?
Give me your hand, give me your lips:
   The morning is ours, the skies are clear,
And it's h'ol for the Downs, my dainty dear.
